Joe Lasiter With 3,616 Wins Freckles Title

JOE LASITER

We have with us today Joe Lasiter, 13 year old, champion freckle possessor of Port Arthur.

According to Joe's 1933 census count, he has 3,616 separate and individual freckles on his nose, neck and ears. That's something for that Patterson, New Jersey, girl champion to ponder over.

Three weeks ago Joe was simply one of the many Port Arthur freckled boys.

Last night he arose to the pinnacle of fame for a freckled lad—that of champion.

Joe capped The News $10 gold piece as first prize when the committee of judges unanimously named him winner at the Strand Theatre last night.

Wade Youngblood, 8, accumulated the second prize and was awarded a $5 gold piece.

Mary Miller, only girl of the famous Miller freckle quartette, won third prize, three brand new and shining sport-model dollars.

Freckle Row Cheers

The Strand Theatre last night was host to more than a hundred freckled youngsters, boys and girls under 15 years, all of whom were intensely interested as fifteen pulchritudinous freckle wearers took their seats on the stage under the spotlight in The News contest, while the judges filed slowly by in the intricate process of determining the winners. Resounding cheers and hand clappings greeted the announcements of the victors' names.

Joe, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Lasiter, 2230 Eleventh street, motorized down on his bike early today with his $10 gold piece heating his pants pocket and when the bank opened he went in, laid it down and got a certificate of deposit. This he stuffed in his pocket and went home, after paying a few respects to youthful friends who greeted him on the streets and burst at a treat.

Joe says he put it at "confound" interest.

"I'm going to leave it in there and let it grow," says Joe.

Joe's ambition inclines toward being a physician when he grows up.

Port Arthur's champion freckles is red-headed, but possesses a calm and equable temper, he says, contrary to all the rules of nature.

"I wouldn't trade my freckles," says Joe. "When I was in school some of the kids used to tease me about my freckles and I had one or two fights, but I kin see now they're worth having. I don't see any of three kids without freckles winning ten dollars."

Joe has a brother who hasn't any freckles. Confidentially, this $10 business has made him kinda-jealous, he says.

Wade's Going To Be Contractor

Wade Youngblood, 8, son of Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Youngblood, 1130 Ninth street, put his $5 gold piece in the bank this morning, too. Wade has the distinction of having probably the largest freckles in town. They gather in clusters, then bunch together like folks do on the corner on pay nights. Wade maintains that this alone prevented him from grabbing first prize. He says that Port Arthur has a serious housing problem ahead and when he grows up he is going to be a contractor so everybody will have a place to live. Incidentally, he expects to increase his deposit at the bank by so doing.

Mary Miller, 11, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. W. Miller, 1009 1-2 Fifth street, not only won a prize

CHURCH BELLS TOLL

Solemn Hush Greeted Arrival Of Funeral Train

By United Press

MARION, Ohio, Aug. 9.—Warren G. Harding is dead. At 12:43 p. m. today the sorrowing city received the body of her son, twelfth president of the United States, who died in the service of the nation.

A hush, broken only by the solemn tolling of every church bell, fell over the town as the train moved slowly through the yards.

While the coffin was being placed on a baggage truck by the funeral guard, representing all branches of the service, Mrs. Harding left the train. She leaned heavily on the arm of Presidential Secretary George Christian. General Sawyer followed. Then came members of the cabinet, and Senator Cummins and Speaker Gillette, representing both branches of congress. George W. Harding Jr., brother of the late president, and other members of the family were next to leave the train.

Casket Placed in Father's Home

Mrs. Harding walked slowly to her automobile as the casket was placed in the gray hearse by the police who were bent by its great weight.

Absolute silence prevailed until the body had been placed in the hearse. Then a hush fell over the city. The casket was being carried by the police who were bent by its great weight.

At 12:32 p. m. the hearse started for the home of the president's grandfather, Dr. George T. Harding, where a large crowd awaited it.

Entering Marion, the train ran through a long lane of men, women and children massed on both sides of the track, their heads bowed.

At the station company of national guardsmen stood stiffly at attention.

At 12:38 with two short blasts of the locomotive whistle the train drew into the station.

All Business Suspended

All business in town was suspended and thousands of citizens stood along the streets and as near the depot as the military guards would permit them.

At 12:43 p. m. the casket was removed through a rear window of the observation car in which it had been carried from coast to coast. There was no sound save the deep clatter of the tolling bells.

The slowly moving procession led by the hearse and surrounded by the honor guard, reached Dr. Harding's home at 1:15 p. m. As it came down the street with the sunshine filtering through the branches of over arching trees, throwing dapple shadows on the hearse, the crowd of friends and neighbors pressed forward and a rustle ran through the crowd. Commanders of militia detachments barked orders and the troops came to attention.

Adieu to Chief

By United Press

MARION, Ohio, Aug. 9.—Through the cool dimness of the old front parlor of his father's home the friends and neighbors of Warren G. Harding began to file past his casket this afternoon in a long, slow sad line.

Soon after the body was borne, under the shade of the maples that lined the street, across the vine-shaded porch and into the house, the doors were opened, the plan being to admit the public until about six tonight, and again tomorrow from 9 a. m. until 2 p. m., an hour before the final funeral ceremony at the cemetery.

Father Sees Dead Son

The chief lines of Marionites and other Ohioans who walked past the casket in the Senator Harding's home gave both greeting and farewell. Many of his old neighbors had not seen Mr. Harding since he went away to Washington to be inaugurated, more than two years ago.

The air was heavy with the fragrance of flowers; outside and within was a deep silence.

In another room the aged father and the widow clasped hands and wept. Before the doors were opened to admit the friends who lined the streets outside, Dr. Harding, accompanied by his son's widow and Mrs. E. Christian, looked upon the face of his dead son.

Dr. Harding bore up gallantly to the trial of the hour, and when he saw that his son was dead, he was the first to see him.

At 1:15 p. m. the casket was removed through a rear window of the observation car in which it had been carried from coast to coast. There was no sound save the deep clatter of the tolling bells.

The following was issued through the United States hydrographic office: The following obstruction was reported: The British steamer Montague reported by radio as follows: July 19 latitude 18° 31' north, 84° 24' west, longitude 80° 00' west, 60 minutes, passed a derelict about 60 feet long, bottom up and awash. but Ben, her 17-year-old brother, gave her a nifty watch to add to her freckle trophies. If she was rich, she says, she would go into some business just to show the men that women have business heads too. She is skilled with the needle and confided today that she is going to take part of her prize money, buy materials for a dress and do the sewing on it herself. And Mrs. Miller, her mother, says she can do it. On top of being third ranking freckles champion of Port Arthur, Mary has the added distinction of being a champion young lady seamstress.

Joe May Challenge Texas. The adults at the Strand Theatre enjoyed the contest quite as much as did the contenders and freckled rosters themselves. Rev. Wm. A. Oschger, who with Mrs. K. A. Young, and Squire Craik of the Plaza, acted as judges, oratorically announced the winners, interjecting a few remarks laudatory to the freckle generation. The kids applauded the speech. Dr. Oschger occasionally uses some big words when he speaks. Today he said he had a speech all prepared but somehow or other he couldn't think of the first word and it stumped him. But here, he says, is what he would have said if he hadn't forgotten the start of it: "As I gaze upon this multitudinous amalgamation of freckled boyhood, chivalry and glibness, my heart voices a tribute which sounds aloft in the altitudes of ethical expanse, there to seat itself with the other virtues, forming a brilliant galaxy of transcendental and incontrovertible benignities," and so on.

The freckled kids say they don't know how to spell the words, but they sound good and they know what he means and are greatly appreciative thereof. A movement among Joe's friends was on today to prevail upon him to slam his hat in the ring in challenge to all Texas. Decision on this matter was not reached by Joe today, but meantime great pressure is being brought to bear upon the champion.

Astronomers say there are no sounds on the moon. Then it would make a fine summer resort.

IN THE BEATEN TRACK

President Coolidge is to walk in the beaten track. He is to voice and defend the policies of the Harding administration. His program, handed on by his predecessor in high office, calls for the following:

Non-affiliation with the League of Nations in any form; adherence to the world court protocol; insistence upon payment of the allied debt upon reasonable terms which are within the ability of the debtor nations; non-participation in the Ruhr controversy except upon joint invitation from all powers concerned and then as advisor only and not as umpire; resumption of relations with Mexico upon completion of pending negotiations at Mexico City; non-interference with congress in legislative work, especially regarding railroads and agriculture; government interference in the coal situation should the rupture of negotiations threaten a strike September 1st; strict enforcement of prohibition and opposition to attempts to modify the Volstead act except to permit sealed liquor stores on foreign ships entering American ports.

President Coolidge was originally an advocate of the League of Nations—a mild form of a League of Nations. His most powerful backers and closest friends are Secretary of War John W. Weeks and Senator Henry Cabot Lodge. These leaders of Massachusetts republicanism are the men who handled his campaign for the nomination for vice president and finally won for him second place on the ticket with Warren G. Harding at Chicago in 1920. After the Republicans swept the country and the Democrats were ousted from power President Coolidge accepted the Harding point of view and became an advocate of the world court proposal.

He is committed to a world court but it will be a world court without mandatory power. Indeed, it is said that he will recommend a world court with reservations specifying that no endorsement of affiliation with the League of Nations is contemplated. In a semi-official statement carried by one of the great press associations of America it is forecasted that in domestic matters President Coolidge will adopt the same policy toward congress as was followed by his predecessor—that of non-interference.

It is stated he believes in the theory of checks and balances and will content himself largely with administrative matters on the assumption that congress is the proper body to determine legislative policies and we are told as the congressional fight warms next winter, President Coolidge will assist the majority in accomplishing its ends but he will content himself with supporting the Republican caucus rather than attempting to dictate to it.

The prosecution of this program may be taken as the voice of Harding but the hand of Coolidge. It is very early to make predictions but it is safe to forecast that President Coolidge will be a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination next year. He is certain to go into the national convention with the delegates of all the New England states behind him and perhaps those of New York and New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

Of course these three states last named may cast complimentary votes for favorite sons but the Republican machinery in all three is controlled by the men who dominated the Chicago convention in 1920 and there will be no change in the operators of the machinery in the presidential campaign next year.

President Coolidge is an ultra-conservative, a courageous man and a man who is regarded as safe and sensible at all times by the vast business interests of the powerful manufacturing and financial states of the union. He is not afflicted with what big business derisively terms political vagaries.

He is suspicious of organized labor when organized labor goes on strike and the way he clubbed to death the organized policemen and firemen of Boston and their sympathizers during his first term as governor of Massachusetts is said to be indicative of the labor policy he will pursue should the acid test come while he holds the reins as president of the United States.

This does not mean that he is hostile to labor, organized or unorganized, or that his sympathy is with the dollar and not with the man. He believes in orderly government and law enforcement, according to those who are the closest to him, but should a great rail strike come or a strike of the anthracite coal miners the coming September men who know Coolidge say that there will be governmental interference and that the President will employ drastic measures to bring about peace between the operators and the miners and to supply the consumers without compelling them to pay exorbitant prices.

This man born on a little rocky farm in New England has been a worker all his life. He was pitching hay on a Vermont farm the day before he became president of the United States. He has been a worker and not a shirker from early boyhood and his fourteen-year-old son is working nine hours a day on a Connecticut farm during vacation to help to defray the expense of college training.

Six times in American history death has called vice presidents to the first place within the gift of the American people. All these did not run true to form. In the beginning they walked in the beaten track of predecessors and then explored new fields and blazed new trails for themselves. President Coolidge promises to walk in the beaten track of his predecessor but Coolidge is human, he is swayed by the ambitions and the impulses and the caprices of his kind.

He is not an untamed man. He has filled many offices and all to the satisfaction of those who honored him. There was no deputy governor of Massachusetts while Coolidge was the governor. There may be no deputy president of the United States while Coolidge is the president. Some day he may take the bit in his teeth and go his own way.

He has powerful rivals. There is a country west of the Allegheny mountains. Its political leaders and its people are not in love with New England politicians or New England ideas. Coolidge is a young man. He has a year and eight months to serve. There is a presidential election coming next year. Coolidge is a wise and cautious man and the candidate who wins from him the Republican presidential nomination is certain to have a fight on his hands.

WHY?

More than a billion dollars has been advanced by government loan banks to needy tillers of the soil to become owners of the farms they till. This should not be overlooked by the critics of the Harding or the Wilson administrations. These government farm loan banks are advancing millions every year to the landless who wish to become land owners. A Democratic administration made these farm loan banks possible and a supreme court of the United States made the act constitutional. Now why damn the government?

All Signs Point in the Same Direction.

CABLEGRAM FROM MRS. JOSEPH GRAVES HAMILTON TO HER DAUGHTER, ALICE HAMILTON

Leslie and Jack have adopted beautiful baby boys. Leslie getting well as fast as possible and is very happy. I have written you all particulars.

LETTER FROM KAREL WHITNEY TO MRS. JOSEPH GRAVES HAMILTON

MY DEAR MRS. HAMILTON: I know you will be interested to learn all about Alice and so I am trying to write you a letter which will be about my reactions to her.

I have never seen a girl who has changed so greatly as Alice has in the few months she has been over here. England and the British outlook have done her a world of good. She is a glorious specimen of womanhood.

She is just as bright and peppy as ever and sometimes she amuses me and shocks the Britishers by her American slang, but for all that she has wonderful poise and is developing into a most splendid woman.

She was greatly perturbed over Leslie's condition and most delighted when she received the cable which told her that the Prescotts had adopted a little boy.

Alice is exceedingly popular among the people whom the Stockleys have gathered about themselves. I told her the other day that she probably would go home taking with her a title, as more than one young Britisher, with a prefix to his name, is hanging about her.

And do you know, the child really blossomed. This made me look the young chap over very carefully when they came to see her the next time and for the life of me I could not see that she gave any one of them the preference. She told me in confidence that evening, when I tried to pump her more, that when she married she was going to marry an American.

Hurrah for our side of the Atlantic!

I'm rather sorry that I did not get upon your suggestion and bring those pearl beads over to Alice. She seemed so disappointed. And then would look so well with that pearl ring I gave her before she left. The girls wear evening clothes more often here than in America.

I wonder if you would mind, dear Mrs. Hamilton, if I made Alice a present of a small string of inconspicuous pearls? They would look so well on her and you people have always been all the relatives and friends I have ever had.

By the way, Alice and I went shopping the other day and we are sending the new baby a silver spoon and spoon. Alice said that even if this child was not born with a silver spoon in his mouth, he deserved one.

She is quite original in her ideas, isn't she, Mrs. Hamilton? I anticipate a very lovely summer with her and the Stockleys.

With much love to Leslie and yourself.

KAREL.

A Thought for Today

Well done, thou good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy Lord.—Matt. 25:21.

You think much too well of me as a man. No author can be as moral as his works, as no preacher is as pious as his sermons.—Lichter.

What the United States needs is summer only every other day.

THE BLUFFER

By Berton Bracey

As a kid he was scared of the other boys.

The smaller ones and the bigger.

Yet he faced 'em all with a seeming poise.

And fought 'em with sturdy vigor:

He was scared of the girls, but he made a bluff.

Of course, and stuck right to it.

And got away with it well enough.

So nobody ever knew it.

And as he grew to a man's estate

He was ever with four athrob.

He was scared of people, and scared of Fate.

And scared of his daily job:

But somehow or other he played the game.

And steadily battled through it.

He was scared and frightened, but just the same.

There's nobody ever knew it!

He bluffed his friends and he bluffed his foes.

With his glorious dissembling.

And nobody guessed his endless throes.

Of doubt and of fear and trembling:

He died with brave words on his breath.

Scared blue, but he wouldn't show it!

He gallantly bluffed through life and death.

A hero who didn't know it!

Rich Women Hire Own Escorts While in Paris

PARIS, Aug. 9.—Sleep and well groomed, wearing the smile that goes with freedom from life's little cares, with the manners of a courtier and the savoir faire of a Parisian man-about-town, you can see him every night in one of the Montmartre dance palaces, paying assiduous attention to a bewitched and buxom matron, going through the evening with never a slip or a shade of annoyance.

"And a different woman every night!" murmur the frequenters of the palace. "How does he do it?"

He does it because he is a chaperon.

There are a dozen or so like him. They are Americans. They learned all there is to know about right life in Paris in the dizzy nights just after the armistice. Their capital consists of one being suit and necessary furnishings, education and good breeding, a generous supply of small talk about society leaders and happenings in three capitals and—ability to look a creditor in the eye and charm away his anger with a smile.

Their work is easy. Their remuneration is the food and drink they consume while attending strictly to business. How they make out for the rest of the things necessary to sustain life is no concern of the tourist agency on whose books they are inscribed and from which they are hired by wealthy women who happen to be in Paris unaccompanied.

They have to be careful, too, about the places to which they pilot their charges. One woman wanted to pay a visit to the Abbey, one of the all-night places up Montmartre way. Her guide objected.

"No, no," he counselled. "My no means. That place has changed a lot in the last couple of months."

It had—for him. A couple of months ago he was "most grander." Now they are waiting for him at the door to collect a little check for a thousand odd francs he signed the last time he was there.

The thing seems to be spreading. Mexico will have a presidential election next year also.

The rather was 3 1/2 feet long.

There is no real reason why the so-called baby week should be a special occasion in our yearly calendar. In the great cities where special efforts are placed on having meetings or city-wide campaigns for the raising of funds for baby institutions and dependent babies, it may be the proper thing. For the millions who do not come under the direct influence of such organizations every week is baby week throughout the whole year.

Physicians and publications which are trying to make the baby a safe proposition are busy at just this very thing the whole year through. Mothers are given careful instructions, which have at their end and aim the prevention of illness for both babies and mothers and the keeping of infant mortality at the lowest possible ebb. While no one period of a baby's life is more pronounced than another, and the second year bugaboo is no longer a fad, the weight must show increase regularly from year to year. The first year, under normal conditions, the baby should about triple its weight.

It may not seem so, but mothers that regular feeding periods are of such vital importance to the baby's health, but for normal, healthy babies the four-hour period seems to meet the general rule from the age of six weeks up to one year. If the baby is breast-fed, the judgment of the mother in most cases determines the amount of nourishment. Not many mothers, in the ordinary walk of life, weight their babies before and after taking nourishment.

If the baby is bottle-fed, use from three ounces at the first month to seven or eight ounces at the sixth month. This shows a gradual increase at each feeding from one to two ounces each month. The proportion of water and sugar is determined by the mixing with the cow's milk. In some parts of our country the milk is far richer than in others and this must be taken into account when diluting. If there is no gain or even insufficient gain in the baby's weight, find out the cause at once, as a loss in weight may mean the loss of a baby. Consult your physician at the first signs of failure to gain.

THE YELLOW SEVEN THE DAUGHTER OF CHAI-HUNG

BY EDWARD SELL. AUTHOR OF "THE YELLOW SEVEN."

This unusual series of stories deals with the exploits of "Chai-Hung," Pennington, a detective sent by his government to British North Borneo to run to earth The Yellow Seven, a gang of Chinese bandits.

Pennington met Brabazon standing outside the Hotel House at Jesselton, his hands stuck in his pockets, following with evident admiration the easy, elegant gait of a Malay girl who was making her way toward the harbor.

"Pennington, by all that's wonderful!"

The taller man extended a hand. "I've been here three solid months—and I didn't know you were on the island. How are you?"

"Fit as a fiddle! Come in and have a drink."

"Chinese," Pennington looked at his watch. "I can give you half an hour, old son," he told him. "I'm due at the commissioner's at four."

He followed Brabazon up rickety stairs to the veranda that overlooked the road. He dropped into a chair and his companion perched himself on the arm of it, beaming all over his broad, handsome face.

"Still at the same game?" he inquired, pushing forward his case. "Pennington nodded.

"Still hunting down the world's worst criminals? No thanks, I roll my own."

He produced a rubber pouch and began manipulating the flimsy paper. Brabazon tapped his cigarette on his thumb.

"Three months," he ejaculated presently. "That's a spell of time for you to stop in one locality, isn't it?"

"That man with the Chinese eyes smiled grimly.

"It is," he admitted. "It means that I'm up against about the toughest proposition I've ever struck. How are things up your way?"

"Rooted! I'm thinking of chucking rubber—and turning my attention to oil. At present I'm at Ketatan, Know it?"

"Ketatan! That's where Allison was murdered by the Yellow Seven Gang."

Pennington was staring at a cluster of flies on the ceiling.

"You've had no trouble since. No threatening communications?"

"Nothing at all. Dawson rounded up the assassins, they tell me."

"Yes," said the other without enthusiasm. "Dawson did his job and the commissioner was pleased about it. There were five of the scoundrels, and we caught, tried and executed them with all due pomp and ceremony; but we didn't succeed in getting any information out of 'em. We're no nearer the solution of the Yellow Seven Mystery than we were when we started. You say your area's quiet. I'm glad of it. But in almost every other district these gang-murders continue."

Brabazon whistled.

"You'll pardon my ignorance on the subject, I know; but what is this Yellow Seven?"

The boy came in with the drinks. Brabazon had ordered, and Pennington smoked until he had disappeared. "The Yellow Seven is a card—like an ordinary Chinese playing card," he said. "You know the things; as long as my forefinger, with rounded ends, black on one side—and a series of dots on the other—some red, some black."

"And this one?"

"This particular card has a bright yellow face, with seven dots or, in all—four above a faint line—and three below it. It cropped up some time back, when Lady Sternway's diamond pendant disappeared from Hewitt's bungalow."

"I remember it," broke in Brabazon. "But the commissioner got that back in a couple of days."

"I got it back," continued Pennington. "I'll tell you all about it some day. There was another card connected with the Allison case, and a kind of bearing the same grim symbol on its handle, preceded an attempt to assassinate the commissioner of police himself. Now the whole island's seething with the cursed things, and Hewitt won't hear of my leaving until I've secured the body of the ring-leader—dead or alive!"

"Know who he is?"

"The most respected Chinese gentleman in Borneo," declared the other. "Brabazon dropped into a chair. "Not Chai-Hung?" he whispered.

"Why not?" demanded Pennington. "Good Lord! He hangs out within a stone's throw of us. I'd have staked my last dollar on Mr. Chai-Hung."

Brabazon emptied his glass. "Why don't you collar him?"

"I've been within an ace of doing so, more than a score of times; but each time he's found a way out."

Brabazon felt for another cigar.

"I can across him only yesterday," he drawled.

Pennington sprang to his feet.

"You met Chai-Hung?"

"Certainly! I was up in the Tamil looking for a pony. I was bargaining with a Rajon thief, when Chai-Hung strolled up. We chatted together for half an hour."

"Did he ask which way you were going?" Pennington demanded.

"I fancy he did; but I changed my mind at the last moment, and dropped in at the Dutch padong."

"I'm more than glad you changed your route, old son," Pennington assured him. "Because if you hadn't, you wouldn't be here now—and, for all your faults, you're one of the few men I shouldn't care to lose sight of."

Brabazon's broad face bore an expression of surprise and amusement.

"What's that? My fault?"

Pennington came across the floor and dropped his hand on his friend's shoulder.

"I refer to the women. God bless 'em," he told him.

"What about?"

"You were positively ogling one when I met you."

Brabazon grimaced.

"When you came up? You don't like Malay girls? My dear old idiot, surely a fellow can admire a certain regularity of feature without being called to account for it!"

Pennington laughed.

"You're a terrible man, Brabazon," he said. "I remember a girl in Kuala Lumpur telling me that you were irre-

Something stuck quivering in the wall behind him.

distable. How long are you stopping in town?"

"Going back by the morning train."

"I was only going to warn you that, if you do happen to meet the commissioner's sister, just try and restrain that abnormal flow of personal magnetism—for my sake."

"What?" repeated the planter, raising his eyebrows. "What's her name?"

"Vivvy," said Pennington. "Monica Vinney. She's a widow."

Brabazon winked.

"I thought you said it was Chai-Hung who kept you in Jesselton?"

"It is," said Pennington, "but I'm not sorry about it, all the same."

"I bet you are not! When's it coming off?"

Pennington gazed dreamily over the rail.

"Possibly not at all. I haven't asked her opinion on the subject yet."

"Good heavens, man! What on earth are you waiting for?"

Pennington turned.

"I'm waiting until I've nailed Chai-Hung," he declared.

Brabazon scrambled to his feet and joined him.

"Want any help?"

"Possibly. I'll call on me for it. I'm just about fed up with the life I'm leading. A thundering good row'd clear my head!"

"Thanks," returned Pennington warmly. "I fancy you'll be in one before long."

"Good enough!"

Brabazon rubbed his hands together in anticipation.

"In the meantime, keep your weather-vane open for Chai-Hung."

He turned and looked to where the waters of the bay glistened in the western heavens. "It's a weary old world, Brabazon," he continued. "used to delight in these nocturnal wanderings, these wild up-country treks. I suppose it was because I had nobody to worry about but myself, my fancy that if I manage to pull this through, I shall find in my resignation."

These kidnaped Hewitt and his sister came with me to look for him. A subtle change has crept over me ever since. I find myself a great deal too solicitous about my own welfare. Queer, isn't it? Cheerio!"

Brabazon went back to Ketatan by the morning's train. He had no more to say about Chai-Hung.

He turned and looked to where the waters of the bay glistened in the western heavens. "It's a weary old world, Brabazon," he continued. Parties for Visiting Guests Large Items In City Social Circles

SUMMER time is visiting time and Port Arthur folk are doing their share of both visiting and entertaining. Attractive out of town visitors continue to be the inspiration for numerous charming hospitalities. One of the delightful affairs of the social calendar of the week was Mrs. I. H. Wheelers' bridge party Tuesday afternoon at her home 1631 Eighth street, naming as honor guest Mrs. W. L. Reynolds of Fort Worth, the house guest of Mrs. J. E. Grammer.

The hospitality was of an informal nature. Beautiful lavender and pink sweet peas, the chosen flower clustered in baskets and vases at vantage points about the room gave an attractive setting for the bridge tables, outfitted to conform to the lavender and pink theme. The tables also carried out the favored colors.

Lovely trophies were given for the scores made, with Mrs. A. M. Armstrong receiving the prize for high score and Mrs. E. I. Welch the second. A pretty souvenir was presented to Mrs. Reynolds as a special gift from her hostess.

During the afternoon hours the hostess served an iced drink and at the conclusion of the games she offered a dainty ice course which further carried out the chosen color theme.

Mrs. Wheelers offered as favors, lovely lavender and pink baskets filled with mints.

The personnel of this charming hospitality in addition to Mrs. Reynolds were Mrs. J. E. Grammer, Mrs. W. B. Johnson, Mrs. A. M. Armstrong, Mrs. W. L. Weather, Mrs. W. A. Adams, Mrs. E. I. Welch, Mrs. C. S. Flanagan, Mrs. N. J. Hebert, Mrs. F. H. Sabel, Mrs. Frank J. Low, Miss Ethel King, Mrs. Overton Able and Mrs. Annie Wheelers.

MR. AND MRS. WALTER BREUX very delightfully entertained a few friends Tuesday evening at their home, 3409 Seventh street, complimentary to their house guest, Miss Mabel Gallagher of Breun Ridge, Ia.

The rooms given over to the hospitality were in attractive adornment for the occasion with an abundance of summer blossoms. Games and contests furnished diversion for the evening's entertainment after which dainty refreshments were served.

Those enjoying the affair were: Misses Lily Lefflage, Lucille Addison, Evelyn and Mabel Castle, Claudia Chapman, Rita Bernard, Messrs. Prescott, Deagan, Dennis Coomer, Camille Levene, Eddie Berglund, Francis Gallagher, Mrs. J. L. Richards, and the honoree.

MRS. M. A. OLIVER entertained very delightfully a few days ago in honor of her little daughter, Ruby Oliver, the occasion being her seventh birthday anniversary. The house was very lovely with its decorations of bright summer flowers and fern grouped in baskets and vases about the place.

The little folks enjoyed games, dancing and a very amusing contest with Dorothy Marie winning first prize and Theda Dumesnil the second. At the conclusion of the afternoon Mrs. Oliver offered a very dainty ice course. The little honoree was the recipient of a number of gifts from her little friends.

Those present were: Dorothy Marie White, Sterling Kuhlman, Janette Kuhlman, Ruth Ina Zelleing, Willie Mae Romero, Mary Elizabeth Mills, Theda Dumesnil, Jack Riley, Mabel Campbell, Ella Mae Oliver, Gloria Joy Bernard, Mrs. Roy Bernard of Franklin, La., Miss Mona Dumesnil, and Mrs. O. Romero.

MISS LENA AND JOSEphine Zinante have returned to their home in Dickinson, Texas, after a delightful three weeks' visit here with their cousins, Mr. and Mrs. C. Matise.

MRS. M. F. CROUCHET AND little daughter, Mary Ann, and Mrs. J. B. Cole, who have been spending the week in Port Arthur as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. P. Dupuis, have returned to their home in Lafayette, La.

"SUCCESS"
An advance notice says:

A plea for the old-fashioned respect and reverence for the stage and its people was recently made by Brandon Toman, the celebrated stage actor who appears in "Success" at the Strand Theatre. The photograph is a film version of the famous stage play in which Mr. Toman scored an emphatic hit in several of the leading cities of the country.

"THE HEART RAIDER"
An advance notice says:

Quite novel and light, that is the way two women spectators of the preview showing of "The Heart Raider" remarked at its showing in the Grauman Theatre, Los Angeles. It is based upon the Taming of the Shrew formula, with a parent unable to cope with his unmanageable daughter. Therefore he is forced to take out an insurance policy against any damages she might incur in order to protect himself. The humor is established in the efforts of the insurance officer to save his company from being ruined. The action presents scenes with Agnes Ayres in a typical

Woman Turns Oil Stock Salesman and Sells Seats on the Stock Exchange to Her Sisters

By MARIAN HALE
NEA Service Writer

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Instead of succumbing to the chatter of the oil stock salesmen, why not take their line from them and sell stock yourself?

Lillian Foley, formerly of Kansas City, Mo., thought this over, with the result that she is perhaps the first oil stock saleswoman in the country. Not only that, as representative for the New York Petroleum Exchange, she's trying to interest her own sex in the thrill of owning seats on the exchange in the joy of being "oil brokers" and the glittering opportunity of earning a million, rather than inheriting or marrying it.

"My favorite thoroughfare is Wall Street," she confesses, "and my favorite topic of conversation is finance." Then she added some of her own ideas on women in business.

"I believe the reason most women don't hitch their wagons high enough in the business world is because they have not sufficient vision," she opines.

Not Housekeeping
"Too many women think of business just as housekeeping on a big scale, or an institution where the big plums go to men because of some peculiar fitness on their part."

"It's true the financiers and big business heads of this day are men, but there's no reason why it should be so, except that women have thought in terms of salaries instead of millions."

Miss Foley is disarmingly pretty and intensely feminine in appearance, but on the subject of oil you forget these attributes and marvel at the number of facts she has collected and the research she has done.

"Oil stock will be as safe as any stock when all are listed on the exchange," she prophesies.

Women and Money
"Women are supposed to be naturally conservative about spending money, to be bad gamblers and poor losers," she admits. "This is natural enough when you consider they have always been dependent upon some man for their money."

"But today, particularly in the large cities, women have been handling their own purses for a generation or more, and have become financially independent—they make the best type of investors, for they know what they are doing."

"Come on in, the water's fine," she advises all women who feel the Wall Street urge.

THE PROTHEON CLASS OF the First Baptist church will send the day in the spacious new basement of the church tomorrow. The ladies of the church are invited through this medium to attend and join the members of the class in sewing for Buckner's Orphanage. Members are urged to bring a light lunch, also scissors and thimble.

Nifty Nipper was digging a hole.

"Oh, dear, my troubles are not at an end yet," said King Snookums of the Pee Wees.

"What's wrong now?" asked Nancy.

"Why, do you know," said Snookums wagging his finger at her, "last night another Pee Wee disappeared. It was Nifty Nipper."

"Nifty Nipper?" exclaimed Nick. "Well, I should think you'd be glad to get rid of him. All the Pee Wees were afraid of him and he'd be kept in jail."

"It's too late now," sighed Snookums. "And as you say, it certainly would be good riddance to bad rubbish to have him out of the road, but when he went something else went with him. The state treasury, consisting of three good pennies and one plugged nickel, has been robbed. Now we're bankrupt."

"How awful!" cried Nancy. "But he couldn't have gone on a lightning bug, could he? So much money would be too heavy for him to carry."

"No," said King Snookums. "We have evidence that he hatched it onto a brown, fuzzy caterpillar and drove off. We found the tracks and bits of fur. He went in the direction of the big mud bank beside the highway."

"Oh, don't you worry," comforted Nancy. "Nick 'n' I will find him. See how little we can make out of ourselves in these magic shoes. We'll follow him and he won't see us coming and we'll find out all about him."

"Thank you," said King Snookums. "I hope you will. We need the money to give some new roads, and through the mud bank until they crawl along and along and along. The they heard digging and then they saw something."

Nifty Nipper was digging a hole Right beside him was the money. "He there's come on and help," he called when he saw them. "You're arrested," said Nick, "stealing."

"Nifty looked awfully surprised. "Why, I'm only putting it in a bank," he said. "I don't know what place for money."

"To this day nobody knows whether he meant it or not."

MARKETS

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Today's dull and uninteresting trading on the New York stock exchange brought out in positive fashion that the market was not to be forced out of its recent trading area on the side of declining prices.

Bears gained confidence from the way stocks had fallen off on light sales in the previous session, canceling in scarcely more than an hour one-half of the recovery from the week's loss. But when an attempt was made to force the downward movement today further offerings dried up and the market settled into an inert state.

In the last hour stocks displayed a creeping tendency on a further restricted volume of dealings. Steel, Rockefeller, Baldwin, American Can and other industrial leaders reached their best prices of the day. Transactions in the rails were featured by persistent strength in the Erie.

The market closed irregular.

Closing prices:

 Wall Street's attention at the opening of the stock exchange today was centered upon the foreign situation. Considerable discouragement was produced by further details of the stormy session of the Reichstag in which Chancellor Brüning voiced Germany's defiance of France.

Industrial continued under pressure from the export decline, the same heavy feeling which characterized the day's dealings of the previous session. Stocks which had been considerably higher Wednesday such as Central Leather, Famous Players and Allied Chemical were still heavy white specialties leaders were also in force. Metals showed a relatively better opening prices:

NO EFFORT TO LEAP HURDLES LIKE THESE

Port Arthur College Notes

Student government of the dormitory at Port Arthur Business college, with Miss Olga Felter elected president of the dormitory girls, and Bill Fildersbrant president of the boys was adopted at a recent meeting of college student body.

Constitutions sanctioned by Leonard Power, president of the college, and "Mother" Landy, matron, were drawn up by the boys and girls. At the organization of the dormitory student government, President Power made a talk on the purposes and plans of the student government system. The dormitory government is patterned after the student government now in force in all the college departments.

Dormitory Wedding. The wedding of Miss Mary Anderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anderson of Sulphur, La., and J. Randolph Funk, employee of the Kansas City Southern railroad, was solemnized in Beaumont on July 20, Rev. J. W. Mills, pastor of the First Methodist church of that city officiating. Mr. and Mrs. Funk are at home to their friends at the Central hotel.

Reporter Elected. Miss Isola Hill is elected reporter for Port Arthur Business college. In the candidacy for the place, she was successful over two boys nominated by the student body for the place.

Entertainments. Culminating in a dance at the Bernard home Saturday evening, given by the Algonquins, a recently organized club among the college boys, social activities at the college have been unusually brisk lately. The Civitan club entertained the student body with a beach party July 27. Joe Price entertained at his Procter street home for the college boys and girls.

Personal Briefs. Miss Gladys Bryan left July 27 for her home in Angleton, Texas, to spend the vacation with her parents. Just before leaving Miss Bryan's sister, Miss Grace Bryan, spent a few days at the dormitory with her. Leonard Power, our president, has returned from New York. Misses Ethel and Mary Holcomb

Sisters Starve After Refusing Friend's Aid

CARTHAGE, Mo., Aug. 9.—Death claimed the second victim of an apparent starvation pact when Miss Monna Coe, 37 years old, was found dead at the county farm hospital here.

The woman, so weak she could only crawl, was found July 27 keeping vigil over her dead sister, Miss Hill, locked in their home here. She had refused food at the hospital and was fed forcibly.

The two women had exhausted a small fortune left by parents, but insisted to those who proffered aid that they "had plenty." They were without food almost six weeks, except for berries picked along the road.

$7,500 PEOPLES THEATER PIPE ORGAN ARRIVES

Work of installing the $7,500 picture show pipe organ in the Peoples Theatre started today when the instrument arrived from a Chicago factory. The console of the organ is on display in the lobby of the theatre.

The organ is of the unit type, with two key boards and pedals. The pipes will be placed in the front part of the theatre, to the right of the screen, and the console, or key-boards, in the orchestra pit. About 10 days or two weeks will be necessary before the instrument is ready for service.

OUT OF RESPECT TO THE MEMORY OF PRESIDENT HARDING

The following banks will close their doors Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock:

FIRST NATIONAL BANK.
MERCHANTS NATIONAL BANK.
SEABOARD STATE AND TRUST BANK.
HOLLAND-TEXAS HYPOTHEEK BANK.

America is bowed in sorrow for her dead chieftain. A man of courage, foresight and gentleness; a statesman in every sense of the word; a true type of the American gentleman, the passing of Warren G. Harding leaves an aching void like the death of a son and brother.

And so in memory of this great man this store will remain closed from 1 o'clock Friday afternoon.

Search Colorado Peak For $60,000 Lost of Early Train Robbers

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., Aug. 9.—Tales of $60,000 in gold nuggets buried on the rocky slopes of Devil's Head peak, have caused a gold rush which is focusing interest.

The hidden gold is supposed to be part of the loot of a Union Pacific train, which was held up by the noted Joel Collins gang in the early gold day of Colorado. A self-confessed member of the gang, who claims he explained his part of the long prison term, started the excitement. He says he helped bury the $60,000 which was too heavy for the gang to carry as they fled.

The former outlaw dug for days before he confided to others the object of his search. He got prompt reinforcements. His story is that the gang marked the trees in the forest that once covered the slope. Years later, while most of the gang were in prison, fire destroyed the forest and this made the hunt more difficult.

Night after night the old outlaw dug, the days being devoted to labor for food. After a while his voluntary assistants fell away. They talked about the old man having a "leaky roof," or an "empty attic."

A Dagger Found. Finally a Spanish dagger, buried to the hilt in a charred oak, restored interest in the search, and once more the peak's slopes were covered with fortune-seekers. Almost disintegrated with age, the relic was unmistakably an object left by wanderers of an early day.

For hundreds of feet on every side of the "dagger tree" Devil's head peak resembled a giant ant hill. Big boulders, rolled from their resting place of centuries, have steadily refused to give up the secret.

Night after night the dim light of the "outlaw" may be seen quivering the mountain, foot by foot. Day after day sporadic searchers—boy scouts, business men, farmers and laborers, men from all walks of life, ascend the peak.

Occasional faint proofs that the mountain was visited many years ago by white men is keeping up the fever of the hunt.

HILLCREST

The Dominating Resident Section of the Port Neches Nederland District.

The great industrial development around Port Neches and Smith's Bluff, the construction of the Humphreys' Refinery and the Magnolia Refinery call for a resident district to meet the demand of homes for the working man.

HILLCREST is situated on the crest of the hill, west of Nederland, on a shelled road leading directly into Port Neches. It is close to the new $100,000 school for Nederland.

Restrictions call for homes of $1000 and up. Here is where the residential part of these communities will be built.

We expect to sell out most of this property opening day, next Sunday and announce this far in advance so you can make your plans to take advantage of the next Tyrrell-Combett Triumph.

BOY SCOUT, 14, TIPS SCALES AT 268 LBS.

DENTON, Texas, Aug. 9.—Denton adds another to her long list of distinguished citizens. This time, the honor comes to the person of Bradley Cain, weighing 268 pounds and only 14 years old, claimed by scout officials here to be the biggest active Boy Scout in the state.

Buster Yates of Lampasas is visiting in Denton, and that's how it all came about. Buster is 14 years old and weighs 203 pounds. When he came here to visit relatives, these relatives thought he was the biggest active Boy Scout in the state.

But this only resulted in bringing to the fore Bradley Cain, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Cain, of Denton, who is an active member of Troop 2, of this city.

The annual cantaloupe shortage will be with us soon.
